Variation in blue water footprint for selected energy crops

Water consumption for same crops in different countries

Notes:
1.The blue water footprint is the volume of surface and groundwater consumed as a result of the production of goods or services.
2. Internal renewable water resources comprise the average annual flow of rivers and groundwater generated from endogenous precipitation.

Source: Gerbens-Leenes et al., The water footprint of bioenergy, PNAS, 2009.